$100,000 ENDOWMENT SECURES DOMANN-SCHUBERT FAMILY LEGACY

Anna A. (Domann) Anderson, DO, '05 was completely blind when she enrolled in the American School of Osteopathy, known today as A.T. Still University (ATSU).

In "The Feminine Touch, Women in Osteopathic Medicine," author Thomas A. Quinn notes, "The osteopathic profession was ahead of its time, not only in freely accepting women into osteopathic medicine but also in openly considering admission of persons with handicaps." Dr. Anna Anderson was a beneficiary of this progressive approach. Upon graduating in June 1905, Dr. Anderson moved to Kansas, married, and launched a successful medical practice and career that spanned nearly six decades.

More than a century later, Anderson's great-niece Phyllis Domann pays tribute to her great-aunt; her father, Albert H. Domann, DO, '33; her uncle, Gustav Domann, DO, '32; and her cousin Walter Schubert, DO, '32, by creating the Domann-Schubert Family Endowed Scholarship at ATSU.

"Creating a scholarship honoring our father as well as the other members of the Domann-Schubert family who graduated from ATSU-Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine (KCOM) was a promise I made to my late sister and is engraved on my heart," Domann says. "It is something I wanted to do for my father, for what he did for his patients and for osteopathic medicine."

Phyllis Domann is fulfilling that promise with annual gifts that will total $100,000. When endowed, this award will support students with financial need at ATSU-KCOM. "I want to fund this endowment with gifts during my lifetime and enjoy seeing the first recipient being honored with this award," Domann says.

The second child of Dr. A. H. and Mildred Crawford Domann, Domann grew up with her sister, Barbara Kay Domann Davis, in Auxvasse, Missouri, where their father was the small-town, country doctor from 1938-1980. They moved back to Missouri from Kansas, where he practiced following graduation from ATSU-KCOM in 1933.

"I grew up accustomed to him being called day and night, 365 days a year, as he made house calls, and hospital rounds sometimes to hospitals in both Mexico and Fulton daily and sometimes multiple times a day if a patient required more attention," Domann recalls. "I would go with him on some house calls and the family would ride along at times when he made hospital rounds. It was our main family time."

Continuing the family legacy by becoming a Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine was a consideration for Domann. Ultimately, she pursued another path by completing a master's degree in addition to doctoral studies. Domann served on faculty at Western Illinois University, University of Central Missouri, and Missouri State University in addition to holding the distinction of having been the youngest Executive Director of Girl Scouts of the USA in the nation.

"We don't anticipate having another DO in our family," Domann reveals. "Creating this scholarship accomplishes something meaningful for osteopathic medicine's future and carries our family's legacy forward in perpetuity." This endowment is a promise kept from a loving daughter and sister, and a generous friend of ATSU. The University is deeply grateful for this gift.

You can add to your legacy at A.T. Still University with a planned gift—of any amount—through your will, estate, or retirement plan. Let us show you the many options, some of which cost nothing today. Contact Brad Chambers at 660.626.2494 or bradchambers@atsu.edu.

BLEND YOUR SUPPORT

If you've been wondering how to make more of an impact, consider combining your current contributions with one that you make in the future. Our complimentary guide Mix It Up: Combine Your Giving can help give you some ideas. Request your copy using the enclosed reply card.

GIVE TODAY OR TOMORROW

Would you rather support our educational mission today, allowing you to see your gift at work, or after your lifetime, contributing to the University's future financial and academic strength? With a "blended gift," you can do both.

This approach to giving can take many forms. The common thread is the combination of current and future gifts. To take advantage of the blended gift approach, you select a way to donate today that makes sense for your situation. Then you choose a way to continue that generosity in the future through a deferred gift.

CHECK OUT THIS POTENTIAL SCENARIO

Mary has supported A.T. Still University for more than 20 years. She has made gifts of cash or stock each year. Supporting our educational mission brings her immense satisfaction and allows her to model her philanthropic values for her family.

But Mary wonders what will happen to the programs made possible through her annual gifts after she passes away. Her financial advisor suggests adding a gift to Mary's will to extend her support far into the future.

Mary adds a gift in her will for $125,000 to go to our endowment fund. We only use a portion of the endowment each year to support our services and programs. The remainder is reinvested, which allows it to grow and support Mary's annual payouts indefinitely.

Thanks to her careful planning, the programs and goals most important to Mary will thrive during and after her lifetime.

ENDOWMENT: YOUR GENEROSITY NEVER ENDS

Would you like to extend your values by making a gift to A.T. Still University that will last indefinitely? Consider establishing an endowment. It's a powerful way to show your support, while also realizing tax benefits.

To create an endowment, you make a gift that we carefully invest. Then, each year a small portion of the endowment is used to meet your charitable goals. The rest of the fund remains invested to keep it healthy and growing far into the future. Here are some typical questions and answers about this type of gift.

What's the best way to fund an endowment? There are a number of different options. You can fund it today with gifts of cash or appreciated securities, or establish the endowment after your lifetime with gifts of retirement plan assets or life insurance benefits.

Who decides how my endowment will be used? You do. You may restrict your endowment to a particular cause or purpose, or you could provide unrestricted funds, which means our board can direct the annual funds to meet our most pressing needs.

How can I be certain my wishes will be honored? To ensure that your gift is always used according to your wishes, your charitable intentions are put in writing so there will never be confusion.
